

Katrina Maguire
Picture House

Katrina Maguire is from Derry and lives in Dublin. This video work is quite different from recent installations which have not involved video. This work provides a way of looking at the act of storytelling. The man talking about his memories of going to the movies is juxtaposed by images from the now disused cinema building. Positioned within the permanent collection of the gallery, this work additionally connects to the act of memory and how unreliable it can be sometimes. The story and the reality of what is described is not always the same or synchronised, this can produce new interpretations, new ways of looking at the world, especially when taken out of context or combined with unexpected elements like the surrounding paintings and photographs here from the collection.
