

Ben Cain and Tina Gverovic
Visitors and the Modern City

Ben Cain and Tina Gverovic have worked together on this piece. They both have family connections in Croatia but live in the UK. They are interested in making something that you have to listen to and look at, something that acts as a kind of map or guide to the city of Limerick. This theatrical shadow and audio presentation explores the process of interpreting, translating and reading from tourist information and guide books. In this process the viewer can get lost or easily misdirected, wandering off into an imaginary city just like many tourists on their first day in a strange place. The work creates a vision of a new place, one tied to stereotype, memory and fiction.
